Dr. R.J. Theissen

Roel Theissen (1968) has worked in the area of banking supervision since 1997; first at the Dutch banking supervisor, then on secondment to CEBS (the Committee of European Banking Supervisors, which has since become the European Banking Authority). He has focused on regulation and policy development both domestically (in the Netherlands) and cross border (within the EU and in the Basel context). His investigation of banks and their functioning also led to work on cross-sectoral cooperation with insurance and securities supervisors.

Since 2009 he has been lecturing and writing on prudential supervision in the financial sector. Apart from prudential supervision on banks in the EU, this relates to areas including insurance supervision, the back office of trading venues, conduct of business policy, and the interaction between the EU, its member states and third countries. Roel Theissen also is a public speaker and functions as a sounding board on current and future solidity requirements in the context of his enterprise 'Prudential Supervision'.
